User Access levels

Oh-Haiku is designed to appeal to and be easy to use for anyone. There is not a requirement to be familiar with the Haiku-concept before using the application. The application is easy to access and you will get “right in to action” to prevent that any awesome Haiku ideas gets forgotten.

Instructions

When launching the OH-Haiku application you will reach the following screen.

This is the applications main screen where you can write/check/save/tweet Haikus. A Haiku consists of 3 rows, where each row should consist of a certain number of syllables. In order to write a certified Haiku the rows should more specifically consist of:

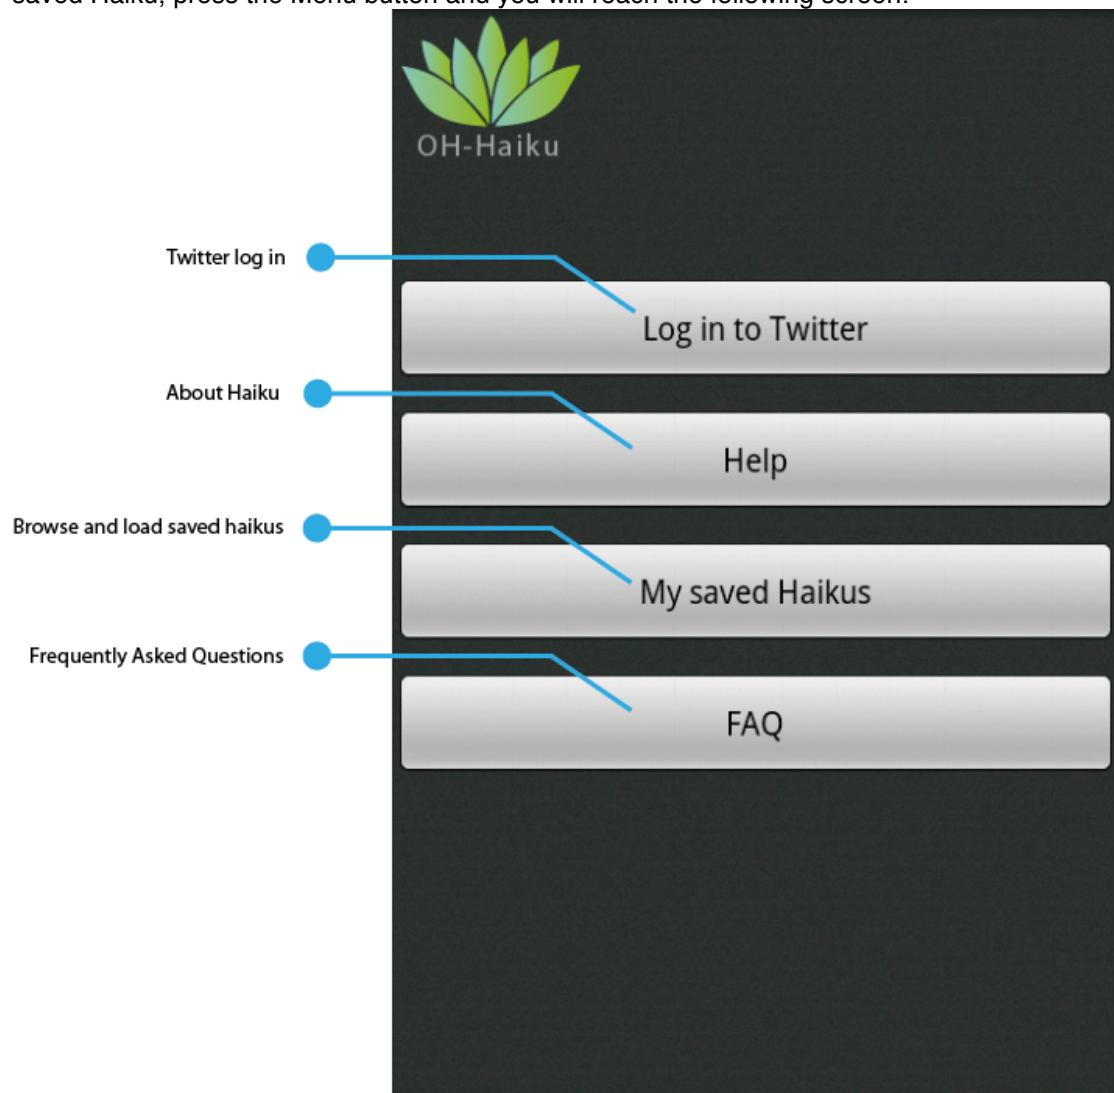

1st input field – 5 syllables

2nd input field – 7 syllables

3rd input field – 5 syllables

When you want to check if your text is a Haiku, simply just press the Check-button. The application will tell you if the Haiku is certified or not. It will also tell you which specific rows that contain the correct amount of syllables by turning the grey lotus-flowers into green.

You can, whenever you want, save your progress and continue at another time. To load a saved Haiku, press the Menu button and you will reach the following screen:

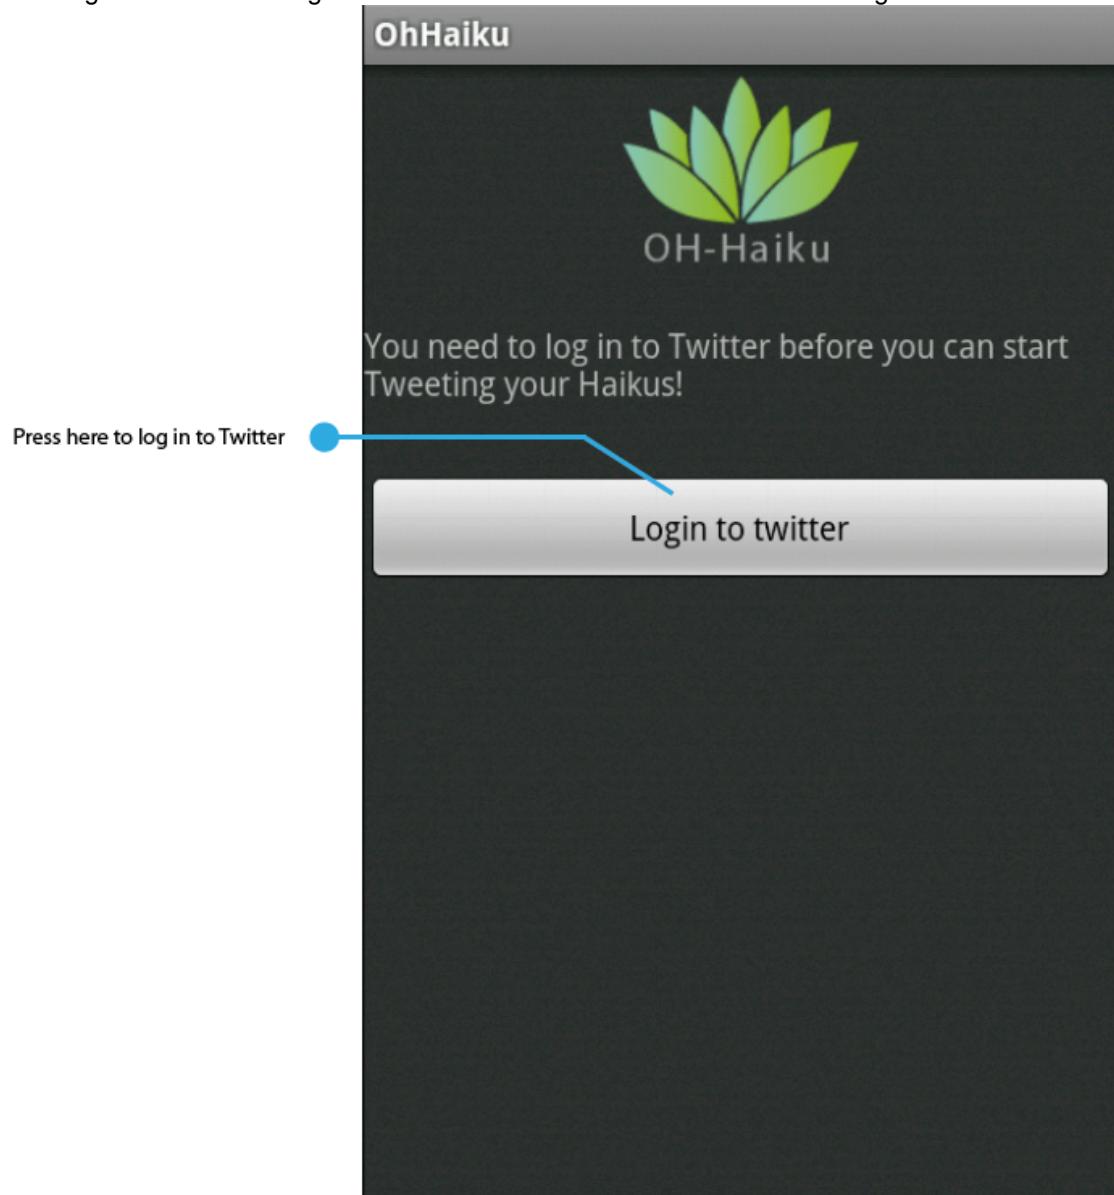

In the menu; press “My saved Haikus” and select the one you want to edit. You will then reach then main screen again and will be able to edit your Haiku.

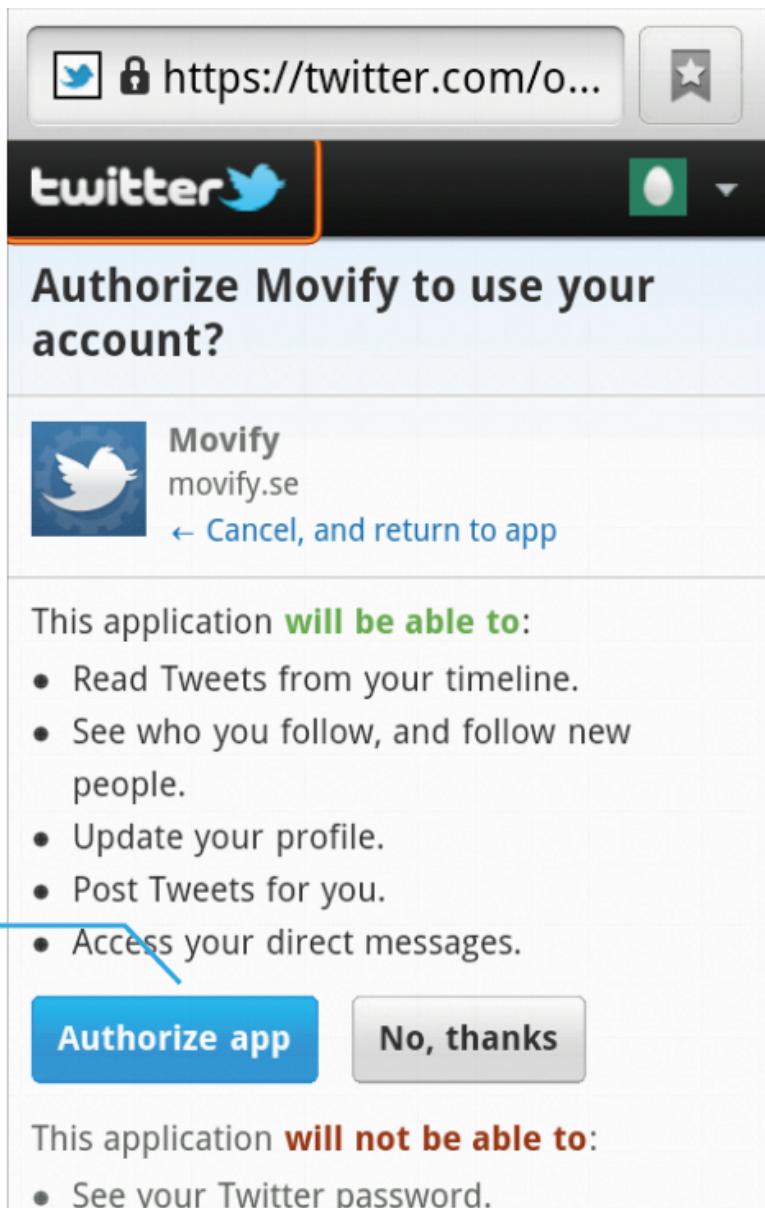

If you are new to Haiku, or just simply want to read more about the concept, you can find information under the “Help”- section. There’s also some useful information under FAQ.

Twitter-functionality

In order to Tweet a certified Haiku, you need to log in to your twitter-account. You do this by clicking on “Twitter Settings” under Menu. You will then reach the following screen:

Press “Login to twitter” and you will be redirected to Twitters authorization site:

Press "Authorize app" and you will be asked to fill in your twitter credentials. When logged in you will automatically be redirected to the applications main-screen.

In order to tweet the Haiku, just press "Tweet" and your Certified Haiku will be posted on Twitter.
